

KINROSS FOREST

Location:

Orange, NSW

(270km West of Sydney)

Trails & Tracks:

Difficulty Levels:

Facilities & Services:

Maps:

PDF

www.cworbc.org.au/wp-content/uploads/2010/03/Kinross-Trail-Map.pdf

High-Res JPG

www.cworbc.org.au/wp-content/uploads/2010/03/Kinross-Trail-Map_highres.jpg

More Information:

www.cworbc.org.au/maps

Clubs:

Central West Off Road Bicycle Club

www.cworbc.org.au

Review:

Kinross has been favourably compared to Canberra's Sparrow Hill trails but with more elevation and a little more rock. As a result it's slightly more technical with some fun downhill. It also includes extensive use of natural features like fallen trees and G-outs through gullies.

While we only covered 10km before the heavens opened again, our guides informed us that there's around 30km of fireroad and singletrack trails in all, and from what we rode there's definitely sections you'll happily repeat again and again! The trail crew has a wacky sense of humour with trail names such as 'Issac has an off', 'El Gastro' and the mostly downhill 'Frozen Dead Guy' which was a personal highlight of the ride.

The trailhead at 'Eat at Joe's' coincides with a healthy crop of supposedly edible mushrooms, although our tour guide wasn't game to prove this fact! There are plenty of trails and it's not the most intuitive place to navigate around, so taking a trail map is highly recommended.

Source: Mountain Bike Australia Magazine - August 2010

