Review:

The mountain bike trails that form the Tyrolean and Mill Creek trail network are a combination of older, hand cut and cleared trail and machine made, shared pathways with raised metal sections over rocky areas. The Mill Creek trail is the newest trail in this section and is part of the planned Lake Jindabyne Community Trail, that links each community around the lake together.

This trail is connected to the Copper Tom sections across Jindabyne Dam wall and is accessible from Townsend Street. These are both shared trails and offer the easiest riding and access to the area. They offer flowing corners, limited climbing or descending and fantastic views.

The many other trails in this network are more challenging and offer technical and rocky climbs and descents, through mixed terrain. Some of these trails have limited use and may be overgrown or unclear in sections.
